The Pacific Poultry Breeder's
Association Hosts
2012 ABA National
Stockton, California
JANUARY 26 – 27, 2013

"Welcome Exhibitors and Members to our 66th Winter Show hosting the AMERICAN BANTAM ASSOCIATION National Meet.

"We are proud to be hosting the ABA National. When we put in our bid to host the National we told the ABA we would use as many Board Members, who are ABA judges, as possible. We have hired ten excellent judges, seven are ABA Board Members, with a large show in mind. We invite you to come and show with us. We try very hard to make this show one you don't want to miss.

"We are also proud to host the following breed club nationals: American Silkie Bantam Club, Araucana Club of America, Belgian d'Uccle & Booted Club, Cochins International, Dominique Club of America, International Cornish Breeders Association, Modern Game Bantam Club of America, United Orpington Club, Nankin Club of America, Old English Game Bantam Club of America, North American Hamburg Society, Plymouth Rock Fanciers Club of America, Polish Breeders Club and Wyandotte Breeders of America.

"Thank you to everyone who helped to put this show together. Anthony Rose is in his third year as show secretary. We are very lucky to have such a capable person to handle the most important job of the show. As President of PPBA I thank all of you for all of the hours and hard work you put in to make this such a successful show and thank you exhibitors. Needless to say without you we wouldn't have a show.

"We are very fortunate to have many 4-H and other youth groups involved with PPBA. I thank them and the parents and leaders for all of the help they provide at our show. A special thank you to Keiman Klovers 4-H for handling the sales room, Hilmar Colony 4-H for helping in the PPBA Café, LeGrand 4-H for helping with the banquet and new this year Ione Community 4-H is helping with the table raffle.

"Our headquarters hotel, once again, is the Hampton Inn and Suites of Stockton with the back up being the Holiday Inn Express in Lodi. The rate is $84 per night and this includes a very good breakfast. These hotels comp all of our judges rooms so please try and stay at one of them. This saves our club a lot of money and we thank the owner of these two establishments. If we had to pay for these rooms we would not be able to have the list of judges we do. The hotel info is in this show catalog.

2012 National Meet ABA Silent Auction

The ABA is featuring a special event sponsored by some of our top breeders. This is being planned January 26-27, 2013 in Stockton California with the PPBA/ABA National Meet. It works this way. The birds will be in cages close to the ABA table with clearly marked signs on the cages on who donated them.

You can submit your bid on a piece of paper and insert it in the box. The bids will remain private.

We are working on gathering donations from some of ABA's top Breeders. We accept birds as well as poultry related merchandise. Those who donate are showcased in the next printed yearbook.

Here are some of the donations we have tentatively secured as of this writing.

Rose Comb White Leghorns – Mike Johnson, Colorado. White Cornish – Chris Tamayo, California. Call Ducks – James Monk, New Mexico. Silver Laced Wyandottes – Brian Knox, New Hampshire

We are still looking for Game – Modern Game – Feather Legged – and Single Comb Clean Legged breeds. We welcome your inquiries.....To donate – call Karen at 973-271-3335 please leave message.

APA NEWS - December

It seems as though the year 2012 has flown by, it is hard to believe that I will have to type 2013 very soon. But, on a more fascinating note, next year the APA will be 140 years old. Part of the APA purpose is to preserve purebred poultry. It seems we must be doing very well to go for 140 years.

Dues notices have been sent, I know this is a busy time for everyone, but would appreciate it if you could return them soon and thanks to those who have paid in advance. Merchandise sales are going well and it looks like December will be very busy with a lot of people buying the 2010 Standard of Perfection. They make great Christmas gifts.

We are getting ready to send out the show reports for 2013. Don't forget, if you have a club or state meet you must request the awards. When picking your judges, please be sure that they are all APA members. This is explained in the show rules, but some shows pick judges who are ABA licensed only and are not members of the APA. This makes the show ineligible for points.

One of the big changes made at the directors meeting in Lucasville was to appoint a new committee for the 2013 yearbook. Dave Anderson, David Wulff, Jamie Carson, and Carl Brantley make up the committee and are working on adding a section of color pages in the center of the book. They hope to have their plans up and running by the end of the year. It would be nice to promote your birds and have people be able to see them in full color. I know one of the things I enjoy about Exhibition Poultry is that I can see all those color pictures. The next APA meeting will be the 2013 semi-annual hosted by the Seaside Feather Fanciers in Ventura, California on April 13, 2013. They put on a very nice show and the fairgrounds are on the beach. It is not very often you can step out of the poultry show and watch the waves, and even some surfers.

I know everyone is very busy with the holidays, so may I just wish one and all a Merry Christmas and happy New Year.

ABA Happenings

DECEMBER

As December 2012 opens - I just shake my head on where did the time go. Best of luck to all hatches and a good winter. Bringing bantams through winter in the Northeast is tough business. It is likely this way for many parts of the country. Ask around and you will likely get lots of advice to help make dealing with frozen waterers and general frost easier. A few quick pointers that come to mind for me is - rotating waterers (have a set inside to replace those outside), extra bedding, and feed scratch at every day to keep the blood flowing. I try to do it at night - when they want to sleep - gets them moving and less likely to experience frozen legs and other cold induced problems. I guess a chicken house heater is a good idea too - but that brings extra costs and the way New Jersey has been - no guarantee that we will even have electric. Hurricane Sandy was not kind to New Jersey - but rest assured - the ABA office did well. We lost power for what felt like forever, but things are up and running again here. Thoughts and prayers go to many in our state and even the neighboring states who are still facing extended outages.

2012 - we will have ABA elections this year. I am working with the BOD on final preparations. Keep tuned to your email and newsletters for more information. Many thanks to those who are running for a position. We thank you for your service and dedication.

Our 2012 National Meet seems to be coming up very quickly. It will be in January at the Stockton show with the PPBA. Jim and Bonnie Sallee along with all their PPBA members are working very hard on making this a show to remember. To learn more, contact Jim and Bonnie Sallee at jbsallee@volcano.net. 209-296-8084. At this meet, we will be reviewing bids for both the 2013 and 2014 ABBA National locations.

The Fall 2012 Quarterly has been mailed and you might have noticed the beautiful cover girl. Thank you to Shari McCollough for allowing us to use her photograph. Shari does some great work and we appreciate the chance to showcase the lovely birds that she photographs.

2012 show reports are being processed and we are still on schedule. Thank you to the show secretaries for their great work in sending in the reports. In 2012, ALL shows require a $25 sanction fee. If your club owes for this - they will be sent a statement.

2013 Legbands can now be ordered at the website. Costs are .38 ea. with a $5 shipping fee. I urge everyone to order early. We based the 2013 order on 2012 sales and expect a FULL SELLOUT this year. Keep tuned to the website for special pricing for large quantities. See your Fall 2012 Quarterly for more information.

I am happy to report that the ABA membership seems to be holding steady and we thank you for keeping us in your hearts and your renewal folders.

I must sign off as I am working on show reports and hope to get all data processed in time form another round of Master Exhibitor awards and Master Breeder awards.

To be a part of the ABA, send in $20 for one year to: ABA - PO Box 127, Augusta, NJ 07822. Your name will be added to our membership list and you will receive a new member packet with all the details. If you want to start your ABA yearbook collection early, send in $35 with a note to add you as a new member with YEARBOOK SPECIAL. That $35 will get you not only a full year's membership, with all the benefits, but will also include three extra yearbooks (secretary's choice) from prior years. It is a great bargain and also a great Gift for the holidays. Please allow 3-4 weeks for processing on new memberships. We usually do better than that - but sometimes, things can get backlogged.

Onward and upward .....

Bantam Regards,

Karen Unrath - ABA Secretary

BACKGROUND ON THE LONGTAILED BREEDS

Part 1 – December 2012

By Brian Reeder

Before we can go into a detailed analysis of the longtailed breeds, we must look at their history, as well as the history of the cultures in which they developed. The longtailed breeds emerged in Southeast Asia. This is made clear by Japanese texts, which state that there were domestic fowl with five-foot tails in Chinyapa (Ho - current day South Korea), as long ago as 500 AD. These birds undoubtedly emerged at some earlier point in time as a mutation from other domestic stocks, and as chickens have been shown to be domestic since at least 5000 BCE, they could have been around in some rudimentary form for a very long time indeed.

To us in the west in the 21-century, the cultures of early Asian peoples are perhaps hard to understand. The early cultures of Asia were in general terms animistic and shamanistic. They believed that all of creation was a reflection of the divine, that all of nature was in fact that divinity manifest. In such a belief system, mutations in animals were often seen as sacred, divinely created, or even manifestations of divinity.

I have long had a deep interest in the cultures of Asia and the philosophies of Taoism and the practice of feng shui in particular, which is found in the Taoist system. The origins of feng shui are very ancient. This system of geomancy emerged from the earlier shamanist beliefs of China, which were animistic in focus. All of nature is seen as alive and having influence on mankind in shamanic, animistic and Taoist thought. The two major energies of feng shui (literally translated as wind and water) are the Dragon and the Phoenix. These beliefs are ancient and I feel that when mutations of long tailed chickens were first encountered, they would have been seen as manifestations of the phoenix. In feng shui, the phoenix is the male principle or YANG. It is the protector and the source of wealth, prosperity and health. The dragon is YIN, and is the feminine principle. Artworks depicting the phoenix usually show a bird with various combinations of domestic fowl traits along with traits of various Asiatic pheasants. The tail plumes are always shown long and flowing. I can't imagine that the fact that it is the MALE bird, which grows the long tails, would have been lost on these early peoples who's MALE symbol was the phoenix. I believe that the combination of belief and chance mutation gave these birds a special place within these cultures and they survived because of it.

Not only did they survive, they flourished. It is said in the old texts that the long tails were kept in temples in China. This would seem likely and in those times, they were fought on ritual days of celebration in some temple precincts. Undoubtedly there was deeply religious meaning to this for those people. We know through archaeology that religious history and legend combine to give us the reasons that the long tails were first kept. Texts say that the longtailed breeds were arriving in Japan before the Edo period, and (as were all things brought from China to Japan) they were being reshaped through selection and cross breeding to meet with Japanese tastes.

During the Edo period, Japan was closed to trade with all other peoples. It is during this time that the Japanese breeds of long tails begin to emerge and be recognizable as such. The Japanese breeds of the Edo period include; Shokoku (the oldest, and most likely very much like the birds imported from China), Totenko (probably also an import and similar to the original Chinese birds), Minohiki and Satsuma-dori (two breeds deriving from crosses of Shokoku with Shamo), Ohiki (crosses of Chabo with Shokoku, which have since been refined by crossing with Onagadori), Kurokashiwa, Tomaru, and finally Nagadori, or "longtailed fowl", as nagadori (naga = longtailed, dori – fowl) literally translates.

It is very important to stress that the Nagadori were not the birds we know today as Onagadori. The Nagadori is thought to have emerged from crossing of Shokoku and Totenko, although MtDNA testing has shown a closer link to Totenko, but MtDNA testing can be slanted, as this only reveals female ancestry, and give us no information of any male parentage. So if the original crosses involved Totenko hens and Shokoku males, we would expect just such results from the MtDNA. Further, the goshiki (five colored) Onagadori is said to be the oldest form of Onagadori, and it is a mahogany silver duckwing color variety, suggestive of crosses of red (Totenko) and silver (Shokoku) in its distant past.

At the end of the Edo period, Japan was opened to trade again, and the unique longtailed breeds were exported to the west.

Most were exported from the port of Yokohama, Japan, and thus, for a long time all longtailed breeds were just called Yokohamas. There was total confusion and misinformation in the west as to the truths about these various breeds. As the westerners were rather lax in management of the Nagadori they received, as compared to the intensive management of the Japanese, the Nagadori never really caught on in the west. It was outcrossed with various other breeds, mainly show type leghorns, to create the western Phoenix, and by the late 1800's to early 1900's, the Phoenix was a breed in the west. Ironically, the major breeders of these early Phoenixes were top show breeders of leghorns. First there was Dan Boone and then his flock was passed on to John Kriner Sr. John Kriner Sr. passed his birds on to his son, John Kriner Jr. and it is from him that Cy Hyde bought his first birds and from that line that almost all the birds called phoenix in America descend. Of the Minohiki, Shokoku and Satsuma type birds, the Yokohamas were made through crosses with game breeds in America and Europe, although none of the American lines of Yokohamas survive to my knowledge. All Yokohamas in America at this time descend from the 1970's importation of red-shouldered Yokohamas from Germany by Horst

Schmudde.

The true, modern Onagadori as we know it today did not begin to emerge until the Taisho period of Japanese history (1920's). It is even later, in the Showa era, that the true modern Onagadori is fully realized (1930's). Thus the older forms of Phoenix developed in the west stem from Nagadori, rather than true Onagadori. However, while records show that Phoenix were known in America in the late 1800's, I can find no records of these being part of the modern day American Phoenix. All the American Phoenix (the real ones, the ones that actually have long tails) seem to descend from importations of Nagadori just before and during Japan's Taisho period, when true modern Onagadori were just beginning to emerge in Japan. Of all the records I can find, only two importations of modern, true Onagadori have ever been made into the US. One in the nineteen-fifties by Leo Demastadier of New Jersey and one in the nineteen-sixties, which eventually fell into the hands of Cy Hyde, and were blended with the birds he had at that time which were Phoenix descending from the Dan Boone/John Kriner lines of Phoenix from blending the early Nagadori with careful outcrosses to show type leghorns.

This is the first in a series of articles that will take a close look at many aspects of the longtailed breeds.
